

St Andrew's College

ESTABLISHED 1867

First Nations Students

St Andrew's College sits on 10 acres within the grounds of the University of Sydney, on Gadigal land and is home to up to 400 students studying across Sydney's major universities.

Scholarships

Multiple scholarships are available every year for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students. Scholarships are means-tested and, combined with ABSTUDY (if eligible), can offer partial or full fee support.

First Nations students are supported from application through to everyday life college. Scholarships, tutoring, academic mentoring, and wellbeing support ensure every student can reach their potential during their university years.

We acknowledge the Gadigal people of the Eora Nation as the Traditional Custodians of the Country where we live, learn and work.

Our College provides an outstanding university college experience, supporting the whole person and preparing students to lead purposeful, fulfilling lives.

First Nations Students Sub-Committee

First Nations students are encouraged to join the First Nations Sub-Committee, which aims to:

- share knowledge of First Nations peoples and cultures
- build meaningful relationships across the College and beyond
- run initiatives that promote and empower First Nations voices

First Nations Liaison

Our First Nations Liaison supports students and connects them with their university's First Nations Centre.

"My focus is supporting First Nations students to feel welcomed, connected and supported throughout their time at St Andrew's. I hope to help students build strong community, stay connected to culture, and access the opportunities they need to feel confident and thrive."

Alec's Story

Alec is from Northern NSW and is studying Science/Advanced Studies at the University of Sydney

As a First Nations student it wasn't only one thing at Drew's that allowed me to feel truly welcomed. Compassion and equity are built into the entire college framework, and it's evident in both the students that are accepted and the opportunities the college pushes us all to achieve."
